Deputy Sheriffs Investigating Violence On Route 62 Project

Mahoning county deputy sheriffs are investigating the dynamiting of a small power shovel at the scene of the U. S. Route 62 straightening project at New Albany early this morning.

The explosion of a dynamite charge which wrecked the shovel, awakened most of the residents of the village, just north of Salem.

The persons who were responsible for the act also put emery dust in the motor of a Diesel tractor. Both pieces of equipment are owned by the Carl Myers Co. of Indiana which has the contract for the elimination of the Route 62 curve at New Albany.

Damage to the shovel, Deputy Sheriff John Riesen learned, would amount to $1,000. Repairs will take several days.

A gasoline station operator at New Albany said he heard the explosion at 3 a. m., a short while after seeing two men walk up the road toward where the equipment was located.

Authorities were expected to question two men who were reported to have been fired from the job recently.

SECOND BIRD

If the problems hadn't been hidden by high feelings, discussion of the national labor relations act would be concerned with the type of agency it has set up as well as the labor board itself. Two birds could be hit with the same stone.

Many of the shortcomings charged to the board have less to do with labor policy than with general administrative policy. As an experiment in streamlined administration—"a new instrument of public power"—the board has left much to be desired. It is too bad that its defeats should be attributed to its connection with organized labor.

The same defeats have cropped out, though less seriously, in some other "new instruments of public power" which embodied the same principle of lumping administrative, legislative and judicial functions under the same authority. Tennessee valley administration and securities exchange commission both have been criticized.

They, too, have offended with what looked like high-handedness to those who had nothing to gain and something to lose. They have sailed close to the shoals of a government ruled by men, instead of by laws. They have illustrated the grave dangers of establishing political authority with loosely limited power. They have, though not to the same extent as the labor relations board, been a source of friction between groups of citizens.

New responsibilities of government, it is said, demand new agencies adjusted to modern conditions. The labor board was a new type of agency. It should be examined not only from the viewpoint of those interested in labor policy but from the viewpoint of equitable administration. Had the wider view been taken, the revisions approved by the house of representatives last week and doomed to be pigeonholed by the senate couldn't be dismissed so easily as labor baiting.

ONLY FOOLING

Closely related to all the momentous preparations under way to develop American military force is a trait of national character. As a people, Americans are noted for what, sometimes, has been called an over-developed sense of international morality.

Along with their sensitive reactions to what goes on abroad is reluctance to interfere in foreign affairs. Every time they have interfered, they have been seized afterward with remorse. It has made them cautious. Out of their caution grew isolation and a neutrality policy. But they continued to be morally sensitive to European trends.

They would have liked to remain in isolation. Unfortunately, there was a conspiracy to make them dubious about their security. European governments organized ideological societies in this country. Their spokesmen made speeches and wrote books in which they permitted no doubt of their intention to meddle in this hemisphere to linger.

At the same time the totalitarian states continued to hope that when they were ready to strike, the United States would remain aloof. They are hoping harder than ever right now; Virgina Gayda, the Italian editor who sometimes speaks for his government, writes in Giornale d'Italia that if the United States insists on participating in Europe's affairs, Europe will have to insist on participating in American affairs. Otherwise, it will stay clear.

If the governments of the United States is embarrassing by its participation hadn't tipped their hands by participation here long ago it is highly improbable the American people still would believe in isolation.

As it is, they've no choice but to believe in insulation, which is the worst news the aggressors have heard since they decided to make over the world to suit themselves. Protests that they're only fooling fall flat in the light of what's happening.

THEY CALL IT REALISM

The myth of realism in totalitarian policy—which is nothing but a mealy-mouthed way of saying that might makes right—is being blown to bits by dive bombers.

Japan revived the credo of realism when it made the mistake of believing it could secure its destiny as the most dynamic Asiatic nation by using violence against China.

Italy followed with the invasion of Ethiopia, further pursuing the philosophy of force with the of Rome-Berlin axis and invasion of Albania. It remained for Germany to make a really startling demonstration with its series of invasions. Russia chipped in with the invasion of Finland. Now it is Italy's turn, to be realistic again by joining forces with Adolf Hitler.

According to the totalitarian version, all this has been exceedingly astute, so astute that non-totalitarian governments are going to be shoved into the shade. They are too wishy-washy. They can't make up their minds. They can't strike. They're afraid to shed blood. They are decadent and soft. They are not, in brief, realistic.

The tragedy is that the argument carries conviction in some quarters of the non-totalitarian governments. There are persons willing to think that falsehood, dishonesty, repudiated pledges, bloodshed, terror, cynicism, bad faith, expediency and even nihilism are closer to realism than candor, honesty, the sanctity of treaties, peace, respect for the right of others, idealism and constructive action. They have forgotten what the totalitarians never knew—that these qualities, like the Golden Rule itself, have been proved by human experience to be the only adequate pillars of society. The totalitarian states ultimately will be the victims of their own realism, or does Premier Mussolini, for instance, imagine that Chancellor Hitler is going to turn candid, honest and rational overnight if he happens to overthrow old world civilization by being otherwise?

BEST FOOT FORWARD

An immediate effect of Europe's explosion was to shatter the early adjournment hopes of congressmen.

Lest new hopes begin to burgeon, it would be a good idea for congressmen to evaluate their importance in the current scheme of things.

The United States is facing a challenge to prove that it can do what needs to be done to secure the things in which it believes.

It accepts the challenge as a representative democracy. It does not apologize for its reliance on deliberation and divided responsibility.

There can be no doubt events during the remainder of this year are going to affect the United States directly. Momentous decisions will have to be made. A period of decisive action lies before the country.

Congress is the American people in action. There are many things to be done—more than can be foreseen. There is no room in the prospect for dreaming and talking about adjournment, not even for the noble purpose of going back home to mend fences.

THE STARS SAY:

For Tuesday, June 11

UNDER a varied and vivid chain of highly stimulated asial forces this should prove to be a day of outstanding accomplishments and unforgettable experiences. Every department of life will respond to an expansive urge to do things in "a big way", brilliant, buoyant and magnificent. High stakes are at issue and high-pressure tactics may have expediency, subtlety and shrewdness as factors. This may involve a complete reversal of programs, with change of associates, environs and objectives, and this holds some very definite hazards in dramatic reversals. But if speculative moves be sagaciously managed the ends may justify the means.

IT IS YOUR BIRTHDAY

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of great aims and lofty ambitions, with the energies and emotions expansive, high powered and indomitable, although subject to shrewd acumen, crafty measures, the co-operation of influential persons, both business and social. This applies to sudden changes of plans and surroundings, with speculation and chance offering either unforeseen defeat or highly gratifying achievements. It seems a matter of keen insight and sound decisions in reaching cherished goals and personal gratifications.

A child born on this day should have splendid talents and ambitions, with energy, industry and expansive ideas combining to build its fortunes and enhance personal prestige, despite sudden strokes or reversals.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E. 45th St., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks Reducing Diet"; "Indigestion and Constipation"; "Reducing and Gaining"; "Infant Feeding"; "Instructing for the Treatment of Diabetics"; "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin".

Diet List

The following list will show a grouping of foods according to their purine content.

Foods that contain a large amount of purine—

Sweetbreads, Liver, Kidney, Squab, Calf's tongue, Turkey, Pork, Goose, Anchovies, Sardines, Meat extricates, Meat soups.

Foods that contain a moderate amount of purine—

Chicken, Mutton, Bacon, Oysters, Eggs, Gelatin, Sugar and sweets, Coffee*, Tea*, Cocoa*, Fats of all kinds, Cereals (except whole grain), Bread (except whole grain), "Contain practically no purine as this pressure tells."

Other patients would improve their arthritis if they were able to improve their general nutritional condition in order to have more energy to fight it. So it is best to give them a full or a little more than full diet high in vitamins, fresh foods—fruits and vegetables.

The gouty patient in an acute attack should restrict himself to the list of foods that contain no purine and should never eat any of the foods that contain large amounts of purine.

There is, therefore, no one rule which applies to all patients with arthritis.

Arthritis is a form of neuritis and whether this is a form of neuritis and whether one should take synthetic Vitamin B.

Answer—"Sciatica" is the name for any pain along the course of the sciatic nerve and may be a form of neuritis. In cases of painful neuritis, Vitamin B has not proved to be of much value. Sciatica is frequently due to posture, flat feet, dislocation of the sacro-iliac joint and other conditions in the pelvis or along the spine, where the nerve emerges from the spinal cord.

"Spoiled Girl" by LUCILLE MARSH JOHNSON

SYNOPSIS

Gabrielle Snow, lovely 18-year-old daughter of wealthy Samuel Snow, an oil magnate, falls in love with Peter Parsons, a handsome young soda clerk. Peter, however, is a talented pianist, a promising vocalist, and aspires to become a composer. Gabrielle's parents object to the match because Peter has no social background. So—one night, while out riding with Gabrielle's friend, Dorothy Mackey, and the latter's fiance, Tony Gaby and Peter decide to get married immediately. Tony prevails upon Dotty to make it a double wedding. After the ceremony, Gabrielle recalls that her uncle's will stipulated that if she married before she was 21, she would not get her inheritance until she became 35. "I'm glad of it," Peter announces. "I'd never have married you if I'd known you would have so much money. Now you'll have to be dependent on me!" At first, the Snows are furious, but finally give their blessing. Peter declines their offer of financial help, insisting on supporting his wife himself, so the young couple rent an unpretentious $25-a-month apartment. Despite its plainness, Gabrielle awakens the first morning with a feeling of supreme happiness. She calls Peter who, upon seeing her, says, "Then it wasn't a dream!" But it is not so serene when Peter returns from work that night to find his home refurnished by his in-laws. Gaby and Peter quarrel and make up repeatedly. One day, Peter gets a letter from a cousin in New York, saying the music publishers liked Peter's song, that if he could only be there with an orchestra, he might get on a radio hook-up. Lack of money stops Peter and he squelches Gaby's suggestion that he borrow from her father, firmly believing that some day he will be successful on his own. It is Gabrielle's birthday. Peter has apparently forgotten it, and Gaby is at a loss to know how to break the news that her parents have given her a car, without making him feel too badly about his oversight. She suggests a walk and Peter seconds it immediately, although he usually wanted to go to bed early. A shiny new coupe stands at the door. Gaby points to it, saying, "Mother and dad's birthday gift to me!" Peter stares unbelievably. "Gaby—you simply can't take it!" he exclaims. "Can't take it!" she retorts. "Daddy would be hurt if we refused after he bought it for us."

Opening the door, Gabrielle said, "Get in, Peter. Drive it!"

and straight as though in a daze. Gabrielle went around and got in behind the wheel. Placing the key in the ignition, she flipped it on and started the motor. It caught at once and began humming a steady song of its own.

She cried out in vexation: "Oh, Peter, aren't you one bit thrilled with having it for our very own?"

"Okay, Gaby, I'm glad you have it. I hope you'll be very happy with it," he said, his teeth set tightly together.

Then, after a second's pause: "No, I'm not!" he denied savagely. "I only want you to have what I can buy for you myself!"

"But Peter dear—"

"Oh, yes, yes! I'm well aware that what I can give you isn't half enough—but it's all I can give you now . . ."

She caught the note of suffering in his voice, and laid one slender hand over his for a moment; the slender fingers curled like tendrils.

He didn't offer to take the hand laid on his so Gabrielle withdrew it. Peter certainly was funny, she thought, never doubting that he would come around to accepting the automobile in time. But then she remembered the scene when he had discovered the apartment had been refurnished by her mother and father, and sighed. Peter did make things so difficult.

Peter did get in, but he sat stiff and straight as though in a daze. She drove around slowly, up and down the brilliantly lighted streets downtown, around the oil derricks whose many lights resembled a huge carnival. There was a new pool just opening, and derricks were springing up over night. She knew her father had two wells about to come in in this new field.

Peter said nothing at all in spite of her many caressing looks. He made no move to look at the new derricks, although the din of the electric drills filled the summer air, as did the smell of the fresh crude oil. He simply sat like a person in a coma and, after a time, Gabrielle grew weary and drove back to their apartment.

Peter hurriedly finished in the bathroom and went to bed, saying not one word to her.

When she turned out the last light in the small place and crawled into bed beside him, she laid an arm across his chest gently. Peter, swallowing a sob, gathered her close and Gabrielle, with a tiny sigh of relief because another quarrel had terminated, snuggled against him.

The next morning, however, when she straightened the apartment, she was amazed to find in the bathroom wastebasket two tickets for a certain cinema which she had said she'd particularly like to see.

They were dated for the previous evening and it didn't take much intelligence on Gabrielle's part to piece out Peter's little birthday surprise that had died abnormally. His urging her to wear a hat and his good spirits until she had shown him the car were mute testimony.

She was bitterly unhappy over it all and resolved to make it up to him.

But everything went on very much as it had before. She went to most of the daytime parties the young crowd had, and occasionally, although Peter didn't know it, an evening one as well. She was extremely careful about these affairs, escorting herself and bringing herself home. Always before Peter arrived.

One night in late August when the heat had been particularly unbearable to them both, they sat in the apartment, trying to eat a supper which was not in any way appetizing. It had come from the delicatessen and Gabrielle had felt even too hot to take any pains arranging the table.

Twilight had deepened into gloom, making the apartment almost dark, when Peter reached back and turned the switch on a nearby lamp. Nothing happened. He rose and switched on another. Still the room remained in shadows.

"What the heck's the matter with these lights?" he grumbled.

"I'm sure I don't know," replied Gabrielle listlessly.

She was trying to quell the little gnawing feeling of guilt that persisted in making her uncomfortable. She had never cooked Peter a single meal; she really doubted that she could for she had never done any cooking.

Excusing herself by thinking that if only Peter would be sensible they could live with her parents and eat Violet's wonderful meals every day, she watched him as he went around testing the light fixtures.

DEFENSE OPENS IN LUDWIG CASE

Court Overrules Motion For Verdict As State Closes

The state rested its case at Salem this morning shortly following resumption of the trial of George Ludwig, 57, of Salem, for the slaying of his landlord, Andrew Drotleff, 59, here last July.

Ludwig, indicted by the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the killing, went on trial last Monday. Court was recessed over the weekend.

S. J. Broonan, former employee of the defendant, and Jay Linden, former neighbor of Ludwig's, were the last witnesses to be called by the state. Linden told of delivering milk at the Drotleff home and later being informed by Ludwig that Drotleff had "bad" died.

Judge W. F. Lones this morning overruled a motion by defense counsel for a directed verdict. Counsel claimed that the state, in its case, had failed to place Ludwig in the home the night of the crime. It was also charged that the state had been basing one inference upon another, which, he said, was not legal.

Exhibits offered by the state were accepted as evidence by the judge.

First witness called by the defense was Gottfried Ryser, Pennsylvania watchman at the Newgarden st. crossing, who told of seeing Ludwig walking home the night the crime is alleged to have occurred. He testified that Ludwig was alone at the time and fell as he crossed the tracks. Ryser said he helped the man off the tracks because a train was due at the time.

Another defense witness was Marie Kovach, residing in the section of the city near the Drotleff home, who told of two unidentified men calling at her home the day before Drotleff was slain, inquiring as to the location of the victim's home.

Dance Talent "On Parade" In Friday Evening Recital

The district's outstanding dance talent will be "on parade" when Miss Bettie Lee Kenneweg, dance instructor, holds her eighth annual recital at 8:15 p. m. Friday at the High school auditorium.

A cast of more than 50 students, ranging in ages from two years up, will make up the list of performers.

The recital comes as a climax to a season of preparation extending back to last fall, for the beginner students. For others who have been studying with Miss Kenneweg for a number of years, the recital brings an opportunity for the presentation of a more advanced performance.

Rehearsals are being held from time to time. The final dress rehearsal will be held at 6:30 p. m. Thursday at the High school auditorium with the entire program, including music, being carried out.

Colorful Costumes

Mrs. Rene Kenneweg, creator and designer of costumes, announces the costumes are more colorful, materials more beautiful than ever.

The recital this year, the sponsors announce, will cover a more extensive scope than in previous years. The work of the students is more advanced, the scenery, the costumes, etc. more elaborate.

One of the outstanding features of the program will be a "tap routine" by Miss Kenneweg. A waltz variety of solos and chorus numbers has been prepared by Miss Kenneweg, including acrobatic, tap numbers, songs and taps and novelty arrangements.

Betty Jean Cosgarea, one of Miss Kenneweg's most advanced students, will be a feature of Friday night's program, doing several interpretive tap numbers. Betty Jean has attended schools of dancing in New York City under the supervision of her teacher, Bettie Lee, and intends to return again this summer.

"Teams" In Action

Barbara and Ricki Rose, clever children of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Roos of Leetonia, will appear in several team numbers labeled "The Apache," and "Spanish Tango." Another clever team, Jerry and Jean Eckhart, who have been appearing before lodges and various other groups, winning several amateur contests, will give their impersonations of the "Swiss Hilly-Billy" song and dance.

Margie and Jack Fineran, who have studied with Miss Kenneweg the past two seasons, will appear for their first recital, doing an intermediate acrobatic-tap.

Miss Kenneweg expects Friday night's recital to be one of her most outstanding performances.

Chrysler Spends Big Sums In Engineering Better Autos

In looking to the future, the world of useful arts is now coming to a deal in values heretofore reserved to "pure science". Fred M. Zeder, vice chairman of the board of Chrysler corporation in charge of all its engineering told 300 newspaper and magazine representatives from all over the country. The group attended a luncheon recently at the corporation's Highland park plant to celebrate the 15th anniversary of the founding of the company in conjunction with the opening of two new engineering and research laboratories.

"In the interest of creating better products Chrysler corporation has spent more than $7 million dollars in engineering and product development during the past 15 years and these new facilities, dedicated to "new worlds in engineering" and designed to extend the range of human perceptions beyond the normal gifts of sight, hearing, touch, taste, and smell, are its pledge to the motoring public that progress on the march in the automobile industry", Zeder said.

In opening these two buildings the corporation has added to its already extensive facilities, 162,000 square feet of floor space devoted to engineering and research. This almost doubles its previous engineering equipment. In these new buildings are 94 laboratories, offices and test rooms for practically every conceivable scientific use.

Matt Klein's Bear System Is First Aid to Motorist

Matt Klein, at 813 Newgarden ave, invites you to get a complete car check-up before that vacation trip, and let the Bear alignment system find out whether everything's all right. This is the method used and recommended by practically all important automobile manufacturers because it is the most accurate method known, and the only system that returns every car and truck to original factory specifications so that it steers like new.

No feature of automotive service has come so prominently to public attention during the past few years, as the maintenance of alignment in the front axle and wheel. This is because the combination of balloon tires, front wheel brakes, and control and causes a large percentage of the automobile accidents on our streets and highways.

Front Axle Twist

Perhaps the most frequent source of trouble is a slight bend or twist in the front axle which throws the wheels out of line and scrapes the tires sideways along the road. It also causes shimmy, wandering, weaving and hard steering.

An essential feature of the new Bear equipment is the fact that it includes a combination axle press and frame straightener that straightens out bent or twisted axles, swayed, buckled, bent, and diamond-shaped frames in the car by cold process. The cold straightening method is approved by automotive engineers because it does not effect the temper of the metal nor weaken the part straightened.

By correcting twisted axles and frames in the car, considerable time is saved. It does not require a car to be tied up for several days while the axle or frame is removed for straightening.

Mr. Klein believes that offering such a service to Salem motorists is a real forward step in accident prevention, and that use of the service will also save motorists many dollars in tire replacements.

Salem Polo Club Romps To 16-6 Victory In First Game

VOTAW LEADS POLO RIDERS TO EASY WIN

3-Goal Handicap Fails to Help Akron In Game Here

A three-goal handicap wasn't enough to make the reorganized Akron Bar K. Cowboys a serious threat to the Salem Polo club in its first game of the 1940 season here yesterday.

The Salem riders spotted the Akron club three goals, then wiped away the handicap in the first chukker as they coasted to a 10 to 6 victory.

The Cowboys, minus several of their stars of former years, trailed in every period, going scoreless in the first, fourth and fifth chukkers. Akron added one goal in the second period, one in the third and one in the sixth to its three-goal handicap.

With J. B. (Pete) Votaw leading the mallet work, the Salem club counted three goals in each of the first four periods before finishing up with two goals in the fifth chukker and two in the sixth.

Votaw led the Salem scoring, sending the willow ball bounding through the uprights seven times. He counted two goals in the second chukker, one in the third, two in the fourth, one in the fifth and one in the sixth.

Pidgeon Missing

Missing from the Salem lineup was Jim Pidgeon, who did not play because of a death in his family. Pidgeon was replaced by Earl Stone, nationally-ranked Cleveland player. Stone contributed three goals to the Salem total.

Despite Pidgeon's absence, the Salem club showed plenty of offensive punch and unusually accurate stick work for an opening game. The four Salem riders, Votaw, Moff, Sheen and Smith, all appeared to have improved since last season.

With Pidgeon in the lineup, the club figures to be considerably stronger than last year.

Pidgeon is expected to be with the club next Sunday when they meet Zelienople, Pa., here in their first start in the Penn-OHIO league. Yesterday's game had no bearing on the Penn-OHIO race since Akron is not affiliated with the league this year.

Summary of the game follows:

Tie In Red-Dodger Series Throws Experts For Loss

Can't Figure Whose Going To Win Pennant Now After Leading Teams Break Even

CINCINNATI, June 10.—Ending of the Red-Dodger series in a draw left some of the experts on a merry-go-round in their attempt to pick the National league pennant winner.

The two teams split a double-header Sunday, the Dodgers taking the first tilt 9-1 and the Reds grabbing the second 6-2 to put them in a seesaw battle for first position just the way they started—with the Reds leading the league, a few percentage points in front of Brooklyn.

The Cincinnati run off Carlton, the hurler who pitched a no-hit, no-run game here April 30, held the Reds to two hits in seven innings and allowed only five safeties for the Dodger victory, the same number given up by Junior Thompson for the Reds in the nightcap.

The Cincinnati run off Carlton was a home run by Frank McCormick in the seventh. Brooklyn started early on Jim Turner, grabbing three runs in the first inning with the aid of a double by Dolph Camilli.

One of Dixie Walker's two-base hits accounted for another Brooklyn tally in the second and his second two-bagger in the fifth counted another. Joe Beggs then relieved Jim Turner on the mound for the Reds.

Home runs by Bill Werber and Billy Myers enabled the Rhinelanders to take the long end of the nightcap score. Cincinnati took the lead in the fifth inning on Werber's seventh home run of the season, with the bases empty.

The attendance was reported as 34,909, the third largest in history of Crosley field.

Today, the Reds meet Philadelphia in the opener of a two-game series Tuesday with Walters back on the mound.

GERMAN HORDES NEARING PARIS

Two Million Nazis Hammer Defenders On 200-Mile Front

Hurling what military experts considered their full force into a gigantic battle of men and machines, the Nazis battered ahead with planes, tanks and guns and followed up with waves of fresh infantry along a meandering front more than 200 miles long from the English channel east to the Maginot line.

Three Major Sectors

With the Allied defenders reported sacrificing ground only "when it was covered with German dead" under Generalissimo Maxime Weygand's order to "hold tight" in the last quarter of an hour, the titanic battle of France blazed most fiercely in three major sectors:

1. On the Allies' western flank, nearest the sea, where advanced guards of German mechanized divisions, some 200 tanks, entered the suburbs of Rouen, rumbled into Pont De L'Arche, and drove into Gisors, only 35 miles northwest of Paris.

2. In the center, where the surviving units of Nazi shock troops, after suffering tremendous losses, established two new bridgeheads across the River Aisne on either side of Soissons and carried the battle to the flat plain of Tardenois, about 10 miles south of the river and some 60 miles northeast of the capital.

3. Further east, in the region of Vouziers. There, just on the edge of the plains of Champagne and beyond the line of the newest conflict, German planes dropped "massive" detachments of parachute troops. The French said they promptly surrounded them and either dispatched the enemy aerial infantry or took them prisoner.

PRESIDENT TO SPEAK ON WAR

White House Secretary Describes Talk As "Important"

States, but that "insulation" remains; that Americans no longer are neutrals but are "non-belligerents."

2. Senator King (D-Utah) suggested that the United States and Canada lease British possessions in the Caribbean for 99 years. He proposed that the United States provide the money, but that Canada be made a "co-trustee" to assure treatment in accord with British interests.

Demand War

3. Thirty American educators, lawyers, writers and business men advocated in a statement that the United States declare war on Germany. Among the signers were Admiral William H. Standley, retired; Walter Millis, editor of the New York Herald-Tribune; George Watts Hill, Durham, N. C., industrialist, and Stringfellow Barr, president of St. John's college, Annapolis, Md.

4. Edwin S. Smith, member of the national labor board, said in a speech that a "drive to identify American labor with a 'fifth column'" had been started by "those persons in and out of government who have vigorously opposed all forms of progressive labor legislation."

5. Rep. Van Zandt (R-Pa.) and Rep. Thomas (R-N.J.) demanded that President Roosevelt discharge all Communists and Nazis employed by the federal government.

6. Senator La Follette (Prog-Wis.) announced that he was preparing legislation to tax excess profits from manufacture of war supplies. Senate Republicans may support his proposal.

The administration bill to raise $1,004,000,000 a year in defense taxes will come before the house tomorrow and probably will be passed this week. The house ways and means committee, in approving the measure, ordered a study of excess profits taxation for consideration by the 1941 congress.

Chairman Harrison (D-Miss.) of the senate finance committee remarked that "we are not in war yet, and I see no need for a war profits tax now." Senator George (D-Ga.) said, "there is no sense in crucifying business just because we think that somebody is going to attack us sometime in the future."

GRANGE MASTER AT GREENFORD

Kirk Speaks at Mahoning Rally; All-Girls' Band Plays

GREENFORD, June 10.—An address by Walter F. Kirk, master of the Ohio State grange, must by an all-girls band and a literary program by a delegation from Carroll county Pomona grange featured a Mahoning county grange rally at Greenford High school Saturday night.

Contending that economic equality for all groups is a necessity, Kirk said "the grange has never asked its members any advantages it would not accord to others".
